EDUCATION IN AGRICULTURE.

Large Percent of Students in Agriculture Come from Cities and Large Towns.

Statistics gathered this season by the dean of the School of Agriculture of Pennsylvania State College show that the "Back to the Farm" slogan that has been heard so much within the last few years, has not been, in the slang of the day, all hot air, but that there has been a very great increase in the enrollment of students in agricultural institutions.

The Reporter has before called attention to the great increase in the number of students of agriculture at State College which only nine years ago, for the college year of 1904-5, was seventy-three, and for the college year of 1912-13, nine hundred and seventy-six. This was an increase of more than nine hundred, or an average, of about one hundred a year. The increase was much more rapid during the last six years. It would doubtless have been still greater had the Legislature been more liberal in its appropriations for needed facilities. With the appropriation made at the last session, some deficiencies will be supplied and the enrollment promises to be still larger.

An interesting fact disclosed by the statistics gathered by the School of Agriculture is that of 733 students who answered the inquiry sent to them, less than one-third were reared on farms. Eighteen percent come from cities of more than 100,000 population; fourteen percent from cities of between 25,000 and 100,000 population; fourteen percent from towns of between 5,000 and 25,000 population; twelve percent from towns of 1,000 to 5,000 population and six percent from villages of less than 1,000 population.

All this shows that there is a real "back to the farm" movement in Pennsylvania, and that the interest in agricultural education is not confined to the farms but is strongly felt in the cities and towns.

As agriculture is the basis of all our prosperity and wealth, these facts must be highly gratifying to all thoughtful citizens.

When you step into an election booth next Tuesday and make your mark for State Committeeman, keep this one thing in mind: It is neither Mr. Zerby nor Mr. Smith that need be taken into serious consideration, but it is what they stand for. Mr. Smith represents an element in the Democratic party that for years aided Republicans in securing offices—especially the state offices. It is an absolute truth that in state politics, the Democratic state organization for a number of years was no less than an adjunct to the Republican state machine. In time their actions became so bold that the rank and file in the party rebelled, and ousted the leaders who were charged with and were guilty of all manner of political crookedness, and placed in their stead men in whom they had confidence—men who now stand side by side with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan. If you want the Democratic State Committee to be composed of men who will aid in building up the Democratic party in the county, in the state and in the nation, you will of necessity vote for Mr. Zerby; if you want the Democratic party in the state to again revert to an aid to the Republican machine; if you want to divide the party in the county, in the state and in the nation, it is your duty to vote for Mr. Smith. You simply take your choice of what these two men stand for.

You will not injure the Centre Democrat or its editor by voting for Mr. Smith for Democratic State Committeeman, but you will injure the Democratic party by aiding to divide it. Every effort is being made to make it appear that Mr. Zerby and Mr. Smith are simply representatives of two newspapers in Bellefonte, but this paper is confident that the voters on the south side of the county know better, and realize that Mr. Zerby represents party harmony, and stands for everything that gives a political party prestige; and that Mr. Smith represents an element that would again as in the past conduct the party to the benefit of the Republican State organization. No matter how well Mr. Smith as a man appeals to you, or how much as a man you dislike Mr. Zerby, if you want the Democratic party to continue in power it is your duty to vote for Mr. Zerby, as it is your duty to vote for Mr. Smith if you intend aiding in pulling down a victorious Democratic banner.

Voters in many of the townships throughout the county will find the primary election tickets in their district blank, and will be obliged to make nominations by writing names on the ticket. The Reporter can see no advantage to the voter, nor any superiority of candidates under the new system.

COL. TAYLOR.

The trouble between Col. H. S. Taylor and W. D. Zerby, Esq., is more of a family affair than political. The gentlemen are brothers-in-law. There need nothing further be said on that subject, as the Colonel's letter in the Watchman will satisfy a careful reader that the Colonel hates Mr. Zerby all over.

Now, coming to the campaign of 1908, when brother Bert was a candidate for assembly against the late J. C. Meyer, the Reporter is willing to say that Col. Taylor was at perfect liberty to vote for Brother Bert, and, of course, he did so. The objections filed against his actions then was that he tried to use the Democratic party for his brother's interests. The influence he acquired as a former county chairman of the Democratic party was used by him against Mr. Meyer and for Brother Bert. But since Col. Taylor is not now a candidate, and since his dislike for Mr. Zerby is on account of a family squabble, the voters of Centre county have no interest in the Colonel's opposition to Mr. Zerby. The questions propounded by the Colonel will be answered by Mr. Zerby when asked to do so by the voters, but no one has made a demand.

In support of the charge that Col. Taylor used the Democratic party (as far as he could) against Mr. Meyer in 1908, the following letter is reprinted. This letter was accompanied by a ballot on which was printed:

> This ballot is marked to vote for Bryan and Kern and the Democratic state and county ticket except for one office. It shows how a Democrat can vote for R. B. Taylor for Assembly.

The letter follows:

BELLEFONTE, October 30, 1908

My Dear Sir:

I write you this friendly letter, and ask at your hands a great personal favor. My brother R. B. Taylor is a candidate, as you know for Assembly on the Republican ticket, and I earnestly request that you kindly give him a vote.

My record and devotion to our party is well known to you. I have given the best years of my life unstintingly night and day to her best interests, and to her candidates, when in or out of office and at this time I feel that I can ask this favor at your hands for a brother, and I hope you will grant it.

If you feel that you will vote for him when you go to the polls on election day, then I have not written this letter or pleaded my cause in vain. If you will not, then I would find no fault even if I knew it.

Your favors, kindly consideration and support to me in the past binds our friendship for life.

Your friend,
H. S. TAYLOR.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

The contest for State Committeeman in the Democratic party in Centre county ought never to have been started, and would not have been on now but for the action of three individuals in Bellefonte. Mr. Zerby, who of his own volition announced his candidacy and circulated his petition, did not do so until the time for filing petitions had almost expired, and in that way left the field open. As soon as Mr. Zerby had his papers filed, the Meek-Taylor-Schofield forces got busy to induce some one to oppose him. Their first choice was Cyrus Brungart, whom the Democrats elected sheriff in 1899, although they knew he had not been a Democrat for a number of years, and that he is now registered as a prohibitionist. The sheriff saw there were no laurels to be won, and refused to represent the faction named.

Prof. P. H. Meyer also of Centre Hall, and also a former office holder under the Democratic party having been elected to the office of County Commissioner, was approached. He refused to be a cat's paw.

With these successions of failures in Centre Hall, the field of operation was changed to Millheim. William F. Smith, also a former Democratic office holder (Prothonotary from 18— to 18—) was approached and induced to take up the fight against Mr. Zerby. Now this Mr. Smith, who is parading himself as a good sample of pure democracy, opposed William Jennings Bryan when a candidate for president; he opposed the Great Commoner when he ousted Guffey from the National Committee; he opposed the Great Commoner when he forced the New York political heelers in a corner in the Democratic National Convention in Baltimore; he opposed the reconstruction of the Democratic party in Pennsylvania of which Mr. Bryan, now Secretary of State, said:

"The democracy of Pennsylvania took a long step forward when, at the recent meeting of its state central committee, it effected a complete reorganization of its affairs along progressive lines. Roland S. Morris, the newly elected chairman, represents the kind of democracy that stands for definite principles, and under his leadership the democrats of the great Keystone state are in a position to restore their lost party prestige and march forward to new victories. The democracy

Must File Expense Accounts.

When the candidates who run for office at the coming election are finished with their campaign, whether successful or unsuccessful, in either primary or general election, they must file their expense accounts in the same manner as formerly, according to the primary act. Where the amount received or expended is less than $50, an affidavit to that effect is sufficient. Any candidate receiving or expending more than $50 must make a full and itemized account of his receipts and expenditures, which must be sworn to. Expense accounts must be filed within 15 days after the primary and within 30 days after the election, with the secretary of the commonwealth for state offices, and with the clerk of the quarter sessions for the county and other purposes.

of Pennsylvania is to be congratulated."

When it comes to local affairs, William F. Smith's democracy is just as impure as in state and national affairs—the percent of impurity can scarcely be excelled by that contained in the three roosters that are engineering the opposition to Mr. Zerby.

Who is to blame for this family political quarrel? The Meek-Taylor-Schofield forces, and no one else.

FROM THE SOUTH SIDE.

Democrat Believes School Board Should Be Composed of Men Who Have Direct Interest.

Editor Reporter:

With your permission granted in last week's issue of the Reporter, let me say a few words concerning an aspirant for school director in Potter township—reference is made to John J. Arney, in the North Precinct. Your correspondent is of the belief that a requisite of a school director should be to have a direct interest in the schools in the district. Mr. Arney has not had a pupil in the public schools of Potter township for more than twenty-five years, and even if he did have children of school age they would attend the schools in Centre Hall borough, and Potter township would pay the tuition for seven months of the eight the borough schools are open. Judging from past experiences he would also oblige Potter township to pay the eighth month tuition, for its was common talk that some years ago he encouraged others in the township who had taken advantage of the eighth month schooling to force Potter township to pay the bill, and it was only by an action at law that the tuition was recovered. Why a man who has no interest whatever in the schools of the district should aspire to become a school director is a difficult question to answer, unless there is a hidden motive, one entirely separate from the welfare of the Potter township schools.

Yours,
TAX PAYER.

Spring Mills Hotel Sold.

The Spring Mills hotel was sold by its present proprietor, M. C. Stover, to Perry Krise of near Potters Mills, for the sum of $4100. This does not include the furniture. Mr. Krise has a financial backer in Frank Royer of Potters Mills. He will take charge of the popular hostelry on November 3rd.

Mr. Stover purchased the hotel property from Mrs. Ruhl, in December of 1911, for approximately $3800. He spent considerable money in the way of improvements. He has a good record as a hotel man, and no one needed an after lunch on retiring from his dining room. He has not decided what he will engage in after his successor is installed.

Rains in Kishacoquillas Valley.

A heavy electrical storm passed over the Kishacoquillas Valley Sunday evening, bringing the first effective rain since June. Barns on the John Zeigler and Frank Almond farms, near Lockport, and on the Haubeck farms, in Ferguson Valley, were struck by lightning and burned, with crops and implements.

The house on the James F. O'Mera farm, east of Lewistown, was struck and damaged. The loss is in excess of $10,000.

"HE" MEANS "SHE".

In the Absence of a Common Pronoun He Means he and She.

A Chicago judge rules that "he," "his" and "him" may be used to mean women as well as men. He might properly have added that "man" may be similarly employed to denote common gender. Mr. Webster's authoritative book upon the subject of words may be accepted as final on this point.

As we have no common pronoun in English, and shall have none in spite of the recommendations of the philologists that we create one, it is the habit of many people to say "he or she" and "him or her." It is awkward and unnecessary. "He" means "he or she." Still more awkward are the words "chairwoman," "lady-manager" and the like. A chairman or a manager may be a man or a women. So may an editor, or an artist, or an aviator, or a chauffeur and "editress," "artiste," "aviatrice" and "chauffeuse" are affectation.

"Executrix" still survives because lawyers are strong for tradition, but "executor" is preferable and the word "actor" may with propriety be made to include actresses.

Pastor to Be Honored.

On September 14th, Dr. W. E. Fischer will have completed his twentieth year as pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church, in Shamokin, and it is the intention of his flock to celebrate the event in a fitting manner, and in such a way that his friends outside of the church may participate. In speaking of the proposed celebration the Shamokin Dispatch concludes thus:

Having entered the ministry when a young man, Dr. Fischer is now nearing the forty year mark as a pastor.

After graduating from the university and theological seminary at Gettysburg, Dr. Fischer was formally ordained and then took up his first pastorate at Centre Hall. He was located at that place for eighteen years and then accepted a call to Trinity church in this city, coming here Sept. 14, 1893.

Dr. Fischer is one of the most prominent ministers in the Susquehanna Synod of the Lutheran church and at the present time is a member of the examining committee of that body, which examines all prospective ministers.

He is a member of the committee of common service of the general synod, which is preparing a service whereby the two divisions of the Lutheran church may become united and in addition was recently appointed on the music committee, which is preparing a new church hymnal.

An Impostor.

A stranger who claimed to have come from Snyder county, where a recent fire had destroyed his home and thereby rendered him and his family destitute, and on account of a withered hand was unable to provide the necessaries of life for those dependent upon him, told this tale of woe to a number of the big-hearted farmers about Tusseyville and Colyer beginning of last week. His appeal for help to provide a home for his family was not in vain and in a comparatively short time had collected a neat sum from the credulous rural folk. To substantiate his words he produced a paper signed by a Snyder county "justice," stating that the man had met with the loss he claimed, and that he was an honorable and deserving citizen. He also had a long list of Snyder countians who had contributed to his "rebuilding fund." After his hasty departure it dawned upon a number of his benefactors that the long list of names, as well as that of the "justice," were too similar in handwriting to be genuine. That he was without question an impostor was settled in the minds of those who were duped when the withered hand played an important part in steadying a target rifle at the shooting gallery at the Centre county fair. The man wore a new suit, and was doing the rounds of the fair in a sporty style.

Repairing Streets.

The main street through Centre Hall was completed within the last week. The work was begun in the spring, and all during the summer the loose crushed stone were avoided by those who used the street by driving near to the side walks. Last week additional stone were crushed for top dressing, and hauled on piles on either side of the road, and at a proper time the material was distributed and rolled down with a heavy steam roller owned by the State Highway Department, and loaned to the borough through the intercession of Russel Gephart, the state's representative on the road operations between Spring Mills and Centre Hall.

Main street now presents a very creditable appearance, although there are many marks on it that indicate that the builders were amateurs.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

HAPPENINGS OF LOCAL INTEREST FROM ALL PARTS

Mrs. W. B. Fredericky of Hulton, Kansas, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. John M. Coldron.

The Erdlys came to Grange Park from the Bellefonte fair, and pitched their tent the latter part of last week.

Next Tuesday the primary election will be held between the hours of seven o'clock a. m., and seven o'clock p. m.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a county convention in Petriken Hall, Bellefonte, Thursday and Friday, 11th and 12th instant.

Councilman W. H. Meyer took a real lively interest in road construction during the past week, and gave his personal attention to details.

The Grange Encampment and Fair will open Saturday. The camp ground is already inhabited by a number of persons who are living in tents.

A new feature on the program for the fair is Children's Day, Wednesday afternoon, under the management of the Pennsylvania State College Y. M. C. A.

Many farmers had their seed beds ready to put in the grain, but were waiting for rain. The showers on Sunday set many to sowing on Monday morning.

Saturday evening and Sunday showers of rain fell in Penns Valley, some sections being favored more than others. About Centre Hall the rain fall was very light.

The State Department of Health will have a large tuberculosis exhibit on Grange Park and an illustrated lecture will be delivered on the subject of tuberculosis in the auditorium Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Joseph L. Runkle, the Bellefonte plumber, is instaling a heating plant in the new Bartholomew building adjoining the Reporter office. It is the bi-loop system that is being installed, a system similar to that in this office, and in several private residences in Centre Hall.

Victor H. Jones, a graduate from Franklin and Marshall College last June, on Monday morning went to Lancaster to enter the junior class in the Theological Seminary of the Reformed church. He is a son of Rev. R. R. Jones, pastor of the local Reformed church.

In the suit of the Middleburg council versus Kratzer Bros., arising out of the latter taking a threshing machine over Middleburg's paved street against the wishes of its council, the court imposed a fine of $10 on the Kratzer brothers and ordered that they pay the costs, which were about $30.

The Bellefonte Automobile Company in a few days will again hold a meeting to let the contract for the construction of the building to accommodate the machinery, offices, etc. Several previous meetings of the board of directors were held, but each time the body adjourned without taking definite action.

The Grange Encampment and Fair is distinctively a farmer's gathering, and should have the support of all agriculturalists whether they are members of the Patrons of Husbandry or not. One of the ways to help the fair is to take there exhibits of fruit, vegetables, grains, seeds, plants, poultry, stock, antiques, anything that is meritorious.

After being in possession of an Overland touring car for a week, A. E. Kerlin, the poultryman, sold it to George H. Emerick, an implement dealer, who is now running it. It is intimated that Mr. Emerick will also buy a Ford runabout, which will be used in his business, leaving the Overland for his daughter, Miss Verna, and Mrs. Emerick to use for pleasure.

Charles D. Frazier accompanied by his sons Miles and Elsworth of Tusseyville called on the Reporter to keep the label on his paper indicating advanced payment. Mr. Frazier is a constable, and also a farmer, and this season cut the crop on the farm on which he lives, which yielded 437 bushels of wheat, and also that on the farm formerly owned by H. C. Shirk, now the property of Howard Grove, which turned out 954 bushels.

James Fetterolf of the livery firm of Boozer and Fetterolf, Centre Hall, who has a reputation for being able to run an automobile with half the "inners" missing, had a wreck while hacking at the Bellefonte Fair, his car and that of Liveryman Bartly colliding. It appears the cars were going in the opposite direction, and that they were passing a heavy wagon, which would bring them to the same side of the street, when the collision occurred. The machines were pretty badly damaged, and the drivers also received bruises, but not serious ones.

HOT SPRINGS SWEPT BY FIRE

Area Mile Long and Seven Blocks Wide Burned.

LOSS PUT AT $10,000,000.

No Fatalities and Few Persons Hurt—Many Large Buildings and Smaller Houses By Hundreds Destroyed.

Hot Springs, Ark.—Fire which started in a negro's cabin at 3.30 o'clock Friday afternoon was slowly dying out at the foot of West Mountain, the southern extremity of Hot Springs, at midnight after reducing to a smouldering mass of wreckage an area more than a mile in length and from seven to ten blocks wide in the eastern section of the city. The monetary loss is roughly estimated at $10,000,000.

Governor Hays will probably order a military patrol of the burned district. United States troops will also add to the guard on the military reservation. In the path of the flames were manufacturing houses, hotels, a number of the more pretentious residences and public buildings, which are in ashes. It is estimated that more than 2,000 persons are homeless.

So far as can be ascertained there were no fatalities, and the few persons hurt suffered only minor injuries.

THE BUILDINGS DESTROYED.

Among the buildings destroyed were:

The city's light, water and power plants.
County Courthouse.
High school building.
Park Hotel.
Moody Hotel.
Princess Hotel.
St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad Station and Shop.
The Arkansas Sanatorium.

Smaller buildings by the hundreds were reduced to ashes.

Guests Flee, Leaving Property.

But few of those whose homes were burned saved any of their household effects, and guests of the hotels gave little heed to their valuables and luggage in their efforts to escape the flames. The fire originated within several blocks of the United States Army and Navy Hospital and took a south and east course.

Frail negro structures in the negro section about Church street and Malvern avenue, where the fire started, made more than ordinarily inflammable by an extended drought, burned like timber.

CARLSBAD OF AMERICA.

Famous Resort Visited By Many Thousands Each Year.

Between three great hills in what early gained the picturesque title of "a valley of vapors," is situated the town, resort or sanitarium of Hot Springs.

In former years a resort solely for the victims of various blood diseases, who came on litters and on crutches to bathe in the magic waters, it speedily became a watering place in all that the word implies. The invalids and cripples are still in evidence, but with them come each year 50,000 American citizens, not only for the purpose of being treated for fancied or real ailments, but also to enjoy the agreeable climate, the charming scenery, the gay life at the great, modern hotels, the invigorating baths, the mountain rides, and the general excitiment and attractiveness of what may well be known as the Carlsbad of America.

GREAT TIDAL WAVE 300 MAY BE LOST

Ocracoke Island Believed to Have Been Wave-Swept Clean.

DESOLATION ALONG COAST.

Washington, Newbern, Bell Haven and Other Towns Have Suffered Loss Of Millions.

Raleigh, N. C.—There is a feeling of certainty that Ocracoke Island, on the coast, has been waveswept in the hurricane and that not a living soul of the nearly 500 people of the island escaped. This belief is based on the high tide in the Pamlico Sound.

Morehead City, Beaufort, Newbern, Washington, Bayboro, Bell Haven and dozens of small towns on the coast are reported as having great losses from the fury of the gale.

At Washington the water was waist deep in the street; two railroad bridges, one a mile long, of the Norfolk Southern Line were washed away, docks, steamships, large warehouses, residences and a splendid public building were destroyed and three people were reported dead.

In Newbern the water was several feet deep in the streets. A number of small vessels were sunk, public bridges destroyed and lumber mills badly damaged.

SCENES OF DESOLATION.

Whole North Carolina Coast Suffers From Devastating Storm.

Charlotte, N. C.—Scenes of desolation mark almost the entire North Carolina coast as the result of a hurricane which struck this section. Dispatches coming in over makeshift lines of communication indicate that the town of Bell-Haven is wiped off the map, while the town of Washington, N. C., not only suffered from the wind but also lost heavily by floods. The loss in Beaufort county, in which Washington is situated, alone will exceed $2,000,000.

Bridges were swept away by the water and wind at Washington, where buildings crumbled under the fury of the blast as they did at Morehead City, Oriental, Bayboro and a number of smaller towns.

At Newbern several streets were inundated and the thoroughfares were lined with debris. The damage in that city alone probably will exceed $500,000. To add to the terror of the citizens, fire broke out during the tempest and was controlled with difficulty. Two railroad bridges, one of them a mile long, were swept away.

In Aurora 15 housese were destroyed, while at Vandemere the damage was heavy, one firm alone declaring its loss to be at least $40,000. In this city more than 200 cattle and hogs were drowned.

Throughout Eastern North Carolina growing crops are virtually a total loss and no estimate of the devastating effect of the wind and rain can be made. It is believed to be, however, incalculable.

WILL PLAY BIG FOOTBALL GAME

Army and Navy Reach an Agreement.

DECIDE UPON POLO GROUNDS.

The Navy Yields To Desire Of Army To Play the Game In New York—November 29th Date Selected.

Washington.—The Army-Navy football game will be played at the New York Polo Grounds on November 29. This was arranged at a conference between Secretary Daniels, Assistant Secretary Breckinridge and the athletice directors of West Point and Annapolis.

"I am very glad," said Secretary Breckenridge after the conference, "to say that the difficulty has been obviated through the generosity of the Navy in yielding to the desire of the Army to hold the game this year at the Polo Grounds. The reason for the desire of the Army to play the game at the Polo Grounds is the superior seating capacity and arrangements of the grounds for such a competition. It is not thought there will be any difficulty in obtaining satisfactory arrangements with the management of that field. Such generosity as the Navy has displayed in the present negotiations is bound to create an even more cordial feeling and cement more firmly that friendship which ever should and will exist between the two services."

It is understood that the management of the Polo Grounds will provide 12,500 seats for both the Army and Navy, with the privilege for each of them to purchase, in case of need, an additional 3,000. In case the two branches of the services should use only 25,000 seats, the sum of $24,000 would be given the Army and Navy relief fund. That gives the Army and Navy the benefit of 31,000 seats, which is more than the entire seating capacity at Franklin Field, where they received 20,000, the balance going to the University of Pennsylvania.

21 DEAD IN WRECK NEARLY 50 INJURED

Express Train Filled With Vacationists in Collision.

ENGINE THROUGH PULLMANS

Most Of the Victims Wealthy Vacationists—Third Serious Accident In a Year—Sections Crash In Fog.

New Haven, Conn.—Twenty-one persons were killed and nearly 50 injured, some of whom may die, in a rear-end collision shortly before 7 o'clock on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, six miles north of here.

The first section of the White Mountain Express, bound for New York, speeding along at probably 40 miles an hour in a thick fog, rushed by a danger signal, it is said, and crashed into the rear of the second section of the Bar Harbor express, standing 100 feet beyond the block signal.

The White Mountain engine cleaved through the two rear Pullman cars, both of wood, splitting them in two and tossing their wreckage and threescore of mangled human beings, some alive and some dead, on each side of the track.

The third car, also of wood, and occupied by 40 boys on their way from a summer camp at Monmouth, Maine, was lifted into the air and almost completely off the track. The car fell on its side crumpled up, two of the boys being crushed to death and several others injured.

Some of the victims of the two rear Pullmans were hurled from their berths over a fence paralleling the track 50 feet distant, while mattresses, bedding and clothing found lodgment in the telegraph wires.

It was the third serious wreck which the New Haven has suffered within a year, and inaugurated the first day of the regime of Howard Elliott, the newly elected head of the road. Mr. Elliott, returning from his summer home in New Hampshire to assume his duties, passed over the scene of the disaster on an earlier train, less than an hour before.

Practically all the passengers on both trains were returning home from summer vacations, and all but two of a camping party of nine, guests of S. Crozer Fox, of Elkins Park, Pa., coming back from Maine, were wiped out. Fox was among those killed.

No one was hurt in the White Mountain train.

MORE NURSES FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Dr. Albert Moxey Says Inspection Desirable

WOULD EXTEND THE SYSTEM

Twelve Hundred Miners Strike in Wilkes-Barre Field—Chester Entertains State Firemen's Association—New Armory for Allentown.

Norristown.—A strong plea for an extension of the system of visiting nurses in the public schools of Philadelphia was made in an address delivered here at the first fall bi-monthly meeting of the Montgomery County Medical Society by Dr. Albert F. Moxey, supervising school medical inspector of that city. By means of illustrated charts and photographs he showed that in schools without nurses 5.06 days were lost for each pupil afflicted with minor contagious diseases, as compared with .34 per cent. of a day by scholars who were looked after by nurses.

The meeting was held in the Charity Hospital. Dr. Charles J. Swalm, pathologist of the State Hospital for the Insane, spoke on diseases of the kidneys. Dr. Wilis Read Roberts, school medical inspector of this place, referred to the results of school medical inspection among the public school children of Norristown.

A short history of the Philadelphia system of inspecting public school children along medical lines was given by Doctor Moxey, who said that rapid strides had been made in recent years. He explained the requirements of the school code governing medical school inspectors. On the basis that it costs 18 1-3 cents a day for each child in the public schools in Philadelphia the saving to the city through the operating of the school nurses' system from January to June, 1913, amounted to $9,122.05, or about one-third of the total expense for school nurses for the same period, he pointed out.

Many Defectives Found.

Doctor Moxey asserted that 15 per cent. of the school children examined were backward in their studies and that 3 per cent. were mentally defective or feebleminded. The principal defects in the pupils were:—Teeth, 35 per cent.; nose and throat, 25; eyes, 18, and skin diseases, 12. Out of the 142,536 children examined last year, 163 were defective mentally, and out of 98,502 inspected in 1913 188 were simarily affected. He attributed the increase this year to better facilities for conducting mental tests.

Doctor Moxey said that from January to June nurses made 12,148 visits to schools in Philadelphia and that they treated 110,000 children in that period. The nurses made 9,046 visits to the homes of parents and took or sent 11,154 children to hospitals or dispensaries for treatment. In addition the nurses held 3,421 consultations in schools and 182,483 at the homes of the pupils.

Button Strike at Wilkes-Barre.

Wilkes-Barre. — Twelve hundred mine workers employed at the South Wilkes-Barre colliery of the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Company are out on strike.

Refusal of 15 men to join the union and wear the button that indicates payment of dues is the cause of the strike. Conditions complained of by union men at this mine are general in the workings of the same company, and the General Grievance Committee is to hold a session soon, from which a general strike may result.

This is the first button strike in this district since the annual convention in July. At that time the practice of men leaving work under such conditions was condemned. In this case the Button Committee put forth every effort to hold the men in line, but were unable to do so.

Chester Entertains Firemen.

Chester.—The 34th annual convention of the State Firemen's Association brought to this city firemen from all parts of the State, and immense crowds of visitors. The problem of housing the crowds was acute. The greatest event of the annual assembly was the grand parade. No fewer than 7,500 firemen were in line, this number representing more than 100 fire companies. To this was added almost as many bands.

Site for Allentown Armory.

Allentown.—After a long struggle between those favoring and opposing such action, the City Councils voted to donate a large lot belonging to the city as the site for an armory to be erected by the State, as the home of the two Allentown companies of the Fourth Regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania.

Dies at the "Movies."

Allentown.—When the two young children of Mrs. John Johnson, of Hokendauqua, who she had taken to a moving picture show in Catasauqua, tried to awaken their mother, who had apparently fallen asleep, they became alarmed at her lack of response. The discovery was then made that Mrs. Johnson was dead. She had gone into the theatre only ten minutes before, and she passed into death from heart trouble, so calmly that those near her thought she had fallen asleep. She was a native of Lebanon.

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Varney, wife of a Confederate general, has lost one son and another is dying from wounds. She reluctantly gives her consent for Wilfred, the youngest, to join the army if his father consents. The federals are making their last assault in an effort to capture Richmond. Edith Varney secures from President Davis a commission for Capt. Thorne, who is just recovering from wounds, as chief of the telegraph at Richmond. Capt. Thorne tells Edith he has been ordered away. She declares he must not go and tells him of the commission from the president. He is strangely agitated and declares he cannot accept. Thorne decides to escape while Edith leaves the room to get the commission, but is prevented by the arrival of Caroline Mitford. Wilfred's sweetheart. Mr. Arrelsford of the Confederate secret service, a rejected suitor of Edith's, detects Jonas, Mrs. Varney's butler, carrying a note from a prisoner in Libby prison. Arrelsford suspects it is intended for Thorne. The note reads: "Attack tonight. Plan 3. Use Telegraph." Arrelsford declares Thorne is Lewis Dumont of the Federal secret service, and that his brother Henry is a prisoner in Libby. Edith refuses to believe and suggests that Thorne be confronted with the prisoner as a test. Caroline and Wilfred collaborate on a letWilfred to join the army. An order comes from General Varney for Wilfred to report to the front at once. Edith is forced to carry out her part in the test of Thorne. She gives him the message taken from Jonas, which he reads without betraying himself. He suspects that he is being watched. The prisoner is thrust into the room alone with Thorne, who recognizes him as his elder brother, Henry Dumont. They put up a fake fight and Henry accidentally kills himself.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

Not at first comprehending exactly what had happened, Thorne rose to his feet, took the revolver from the other's hand, and stood over the body of his mortally wounded brother, the awful anguish of his heart in his face.

"Harry!" he whispered. "My God, you have shot yourself!"

But Henry Dumont was past speaking. He simply smiled at his brother, and closed his eyes. The next instant the room was filled with light and sound. From every window and door people poured in; the soldiers from the porches, from the hall, Mrs. Varney, Arrelsford and Edith; from the other side of the hall a hubbub of screams and cries rose from behind the locked door where the sewing women sat. Martha brought up the rear with lights, which Arrelsford took from her and set on the table. The room was again brightly illuminated.

As they crowded through the various entrances, their eyes fell upon Thorne. He was leaning nonchalantly against the table, his revolver in his hand, a look of absolute indifference upon his face. His acting was superb had they but known it. He could not betray himself now and make vain his brother's sublime act of self-sacrifice for the cause. There was a tumult of shouts and sudden cries:

"Where is he? What has he done? This way now!"

Most of those who entered had eyes only for the man lying upon the floor, blood welling darkly through his gray shirt exposed by the opening of his coat which had been torn apart in the struggle. Three people had eyes only for Thorne, the man who hated him, the girl who loved him, and the woman who suspected him.

Thorne did not glance once at the girl who loved him, or at the man who hated him, or at the woman who suspected him. He fixed his eyes upon the corporal of the guard.

"There's your prisoner, corporal," he said calmly, without a break in his voice, although such anguish possessed him as he had never before experienced and lived through, but his control was absolutely perfect.

And his quiet words and quiet demeanor increased the hate of one man, and the suspicions of one woman, and the love and admiration of the other.

"There's your prisoner," he said, slipping his revolver slowly back into its holster. "We had a bit of a struggle and I had to shoot him. Look out for him."

CHAPTER X.

Caroline Mitford Writes a Dispatch.

The war department telegraph office had once been a handsome apartment, one of those old-fashioned, heavily corniced, marble-manteled, low-windowed, double-doored rooms in a public building. It was now in a state of extreme dilapidation, the neglected and forlorn condition somehow being significant of the moribund Confederacy in which practically everything was either dead or dying but the men and women.

A large double door in one corner gave entrance to a corridor. The doors were of handsome mahogany, but they had been kicked and battered until varnish and polish had both disappeared and they looked as dilapidated as the cob-webbed corners and the broken moldings. On the other side of the room, three long French windows gave entrance to a shallow balcony of cast iron fantastically molded, which hung against the outer wall. Beyond this the observer peering through the dusty panes could discern the large white pillars of the huge porch which overhung the front of the building. Further away beyond the shadow of the porch were visible the lights of the sleeping town, seen dimly in the bright moonlight.

The handsome furniture which the room had probably once contained, had been long since displaced by the rude telegraph equipment and the heavy plaster cornices and moldings were sadly marred by telegraph wires which ran down the walls to the tables, rough pine affairs, which carried the instruments. There were two of these tables, each with a telegraph key at either end. One of them stood near the center of the room, and the other up against the fine old marble mantel, chipped, battered, ruined like the rest of the room. For the rest, the apartment contained a desk, shelves with the batteries on them, and half a dozen chairs of the commonest and cheapest variety. The floor was bare, dusty, and tobacco stained. The sole remnant of the ancient glory of the room was a large handsome old clock on the wall above the mantel, the hands of which pointed to the hour of ten.

But if the room itself was in a dingy and even dirty condition, the occupants were very much alive. One young man, Lieutenant Allison, sat at the table under the clock, and another, Lieutenant Foray, at the table in the center of the room. Both were busy sending or receiving messages. The instruments kept up a continuous clicking, heard distinctly above the buzz of conversation which came from half a dozen youngsters, scarcely more than boys, grouped together at the opposite side of the room, waiting to take to the various offices of the department, or to the several officials of the government, the messages which were constantly being handed out to them by the two military operators.

In the midst of this busy activity there came the noise of drums, faintly at first, but presently growing clearer and louder, while the tramp of many feet sounded in the street below.

"What's that?" asked one messenger of the other.

"I don't know," was the answer, "troops of some kind. I'll look out and see."

He stepped to one of the long windows, opened it, and went out on the balcony. The other young fellows clustered at his back or peered through the other windows.

"It's the Richmond Grays," said the observer outside.

"Yes, that's what they are. You can see their uniforms. They must be sending them down to the lines at Petersburg," said another

"Well, I don't believe they would send the Grays out unless there was something going on tonight," observed a third

"Tonight, why, by heavens, it's as quiet as a tomb," broke in a fourth. "I don't hear a sound from the front."

"That's probably what's worrying them. It is so damn unusual," returned the first messenger.

"Things have come to a pretty pass if the grandfathers of the home guard have got to go to the front," remarked another.

"Following in the footsteps of their grandsons" said the first. "I wish I could go. I hate this business of carrying telegrams and—"

"Messenger here!" cried Lieutenant Foray, folding up a message and inserting it in its envelope.

The nearest youngster detached himself from the group while all of them turned away from the windows, stepped to the side of the officer, and saluted.

"War department," said Foray tersely. "Tell the secretary it's from General Lee, and here's a duplicate which you are to give to the president"

"Very good, sir," said the messenger, taking the message and turning away.

As he passed out of the door, an orderly entered the room, stepped to the side of Lieutenant Foray, the senior of the two officers on duty, clicked his heels together and saluted.

"Secretary's compliments, sir, and he wants to know if there is anything from General Lee," he said.

"My compliments to the secretary," returned the lieutenant. "I have just sent a message to his office with a duplicate for the president."

"The president's with the cabinet yet, sir," returned the orderly. "He didn't go home. The secretary's there, too. They want an operator right quick to take down some cipher telegrams."

Lieutenant Foray looked over to his subordinate.

"Got anything on, Charlie?" he called out.

"Not right now," answered Lieutenant Allison.

"Well, go over with the orderly to the cabinet room and take down their ciphers. Hurry back though," said Foray as Allison slipped on his coat—both officers had been working in their shirt sleeves—"we need you here. We are so short-handed in the office now that I don't know how we are going to get through tonight. I can't handle four instruments, and—"

"I will do my best," said Allison, turning away rapidly.

He bowed as he did so to a little party which at that moment entered the room through the door, obstructing his passage. There were two very spick and span young officers with Miss Caroline Mitford between them, while just behind loomed the ponderous figure of old Martha.

"You wait in the hall right here, Martha; I won't be long," said Caroline, pausing a moment to let the others precede her.

The two young men stopped on either side of the door and waited for her.

"Miss Mitford," said the elder, "this is the department telegraph office."

"Thank you," said Caroline, entering the room with only the briefest of acknowledgments of the profound bows of her escorts.

She was evidently very much agitated and troubled over what she was about to attempt. The two young men followed her as she stepped down the long room.

"I am afraid you have gone back on the army, Miss Mitford," said one of them pleasantly.

"Gone back on the army, why?" asked Caroline mystified.

"Seems like we should have a salute as you went by."

"Oh, yes," said the girl.

She raised her hand and saluted in a perfunctory and absent-minded manner, then turned away from them. She nodded to the messengers, some of whom she knew. One of them, who knew her best, stepped forward.

"Good evening, Miss Mitford, could we do anything in the office for you tonight?" he asked.

"Oh, yes—you can. I want to send a—a telegram."

The other of the young officers who had escorted her, who had remained silent, now entered the conversation.

The Instruments Kept Up a Continuous Clicking.

"Have you been receiving some bad news, Miss Mitford?" he asked sympathetically.

"Oh, no."

"Maybe some friend of yours has gone to the front, and—" interposed the first officer.

"Well, supposing he had," said Caroline, "would you call that bad news?"

"I don't know as you would exactly like to—"

"Let me tell you," said Caroline, "as you don't seem to know, that all my friends have gone to the front."

There was an emphasis on the pronoun which should have warned the young soldier what was about to occur, but he rushed blindly to his doom.

"I hope not all, Miss Mitford," he replied.

"Yes, all," rejoined Caroline, making the "all" very emphatic, "for if they did not they wouldn't be my friends."

"But some of us are obliged to stay here to take care of you, you know," contributed the other young man.

"Well, there are altogether too many of you trying to take care of me," said Caroline saucily, with some return of her usual lightness, "and you are all discharged."

"Do you mean that, Miss Mitford?"

"I certainly do."

"Well, I suppose if we are really discharged, we will have to go," returned the other.

"Yes," said his companion regretfully, "but we are mighty sorry to see you in such low spirits."

"Would you like to put me in real good spirits, you two?" asked Caroline, resolved to read these young dandies who were staying at home a lesson.

"Wouldn't we?" they both cried together. "There's nothing we would like better."

"Well, I will tell you just what to do then," returned the girl gravely and with deep meaning.

Everybody in the room, with the exception of Lieutenant Foray, was now listening intently.

"Start right out this very night," said the girl, "and don't stop till you get to where my real friends are, lying in trenches and ditches and earthworks between us and the Yankee guns."

"But really, Miss Mitford," began one, his face flushing at her severe rebuke, "you don't absolutely mean that."

"So far as we are concerned," said one of the messengers, including his companions with a sweep of his hand, "we'd like nothing better, but they won't let us go, and—"

"I know they won't," said Caroline, "but so far as you two gentlemen are concerned, I really mean it. Go and fight the Yankees a few days and lie in ditches a few nights until those uniforms you've got on look as if they might have been of some use to somebody. If you are so anxious to do something for me, that is what you can do. It is the only thing I want, it is the only thing anybody wants."

"Messenger here!" cried Lieutenant Foray as the two young officers, humiliated beyond expression by the taunts of the impudent young maiden, backed away and finally managed to make an ungraceful exit through the open door, followed by the titters of the messengers, who took advantage of the presence of the young girl to indulge in this grave breach of discipline.

"Messenger!" cried Foray impatiently.

"Here, sir," came the answer.

"Commissary general's office!" was the injunction with which Foray handed the man the telegram.

He looked up at the same time, and with a great start of surprise caught sight of Caroline at the far end of the long room.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Mitford," said the operator, scrambling to his feet and making a frantic effort to get into his coat. "I heard some one come in, but I was busy with an important message and didn't appreciate that—"

"No, never mind, don't put on your coat," said Caroline. "I came on business, and—"

"You want to send a telegram?" asked the Lieutenant.

"Yes."

"I am afraid we can't do anything for you here, Miss Mitford, this is a War Department Official Telegraph Office, you know."

"Yes, I know," said Caroline, "but it is the only way to send it where I want it to go, and I—"

At that moment the clicking of a key called Lieutenant Foray away.

"Excuse me," he said, stepping quickly to his table.

Miss Mitford, who had never before been in a telegraph office, was much mystified by the peremptory manner in which the officer had cut her short, but she had nothing to do but wait. Presently the message was transcribed and another messenger was called.

"Over to the Department, quick as you can go. They are waiting for it," said Foray. "Now, what was it you wanted me to do, Miss Mitford?"

"Just to—to send a telegram," faltered Caroline.

"It's private business, is it not?" said Foray.

"Yes, it is strictly private."

"Then you will have to get an order from—"

"That is what I thought," said Caroline, "so here it is."

"Why didn't you tell me before," returned Foray, taking the paper. "Oh—Major Selwin—"

"Yes, he—he's one of my friends."

"It's all right then," interposed the lieutenant, who was naturally very businesslike and peremptory.

He pushed a chair to the other side of the table, placed a small sheet of paper on the table in front of her, and shoved the pen and ink conveniently to hand.

"You can write there, Miss Mitford," he said.

"Thank you," said Caroline, looking rather ruefully at the tiny piece of paper which had been provided for her.

Paper was a scarce article then, and every scrap was precious. She decided that such a piece was not sufficient for her purposes, and when Lieutenant Foray's back was turned she took a larger piece of paper of sufficient capacity to contain her important message, to the composition of which she proceeded with much difficulty and many pauses and sighs.

DEEP BREATHING BEFORE BED

English Physician Gives Some Simple Rules That Will Aid Seekers After Health.

A correspondent of the Medical Times sends an interesting note on deep breathing. The best time (he says) seems to be immediately before retiring to bed, as, doing nothing more before lying down, the habit continues and becomes fixed; the window, of course, should be open more or less.

After breathing in as much as possible through the nose (out, anyhow, either mouth or nose), the nose should be held by the thumb and forefinger with a handkerchief for about fifteen seconds to prevent the escape of air, and thereby force the constituents of the air over the system. This should be repeated from four to eight times at intervals of about half a minute.

The particular proof of this being more effective than other methods is seen in the following experience: After following the above method I notice that at the heaviest meal of the day my pulse quickens the same whether I take fish or a strong meat, such as beef or mutton; before observing the above points in deep breathing as to time and holding the nose my pulse quickened much more after strong meat than after fish.

Orange Blossom Anaesthetic.

A Baltimore surgeon has discovered a new anaesthetic in orange blossoms which he has found may be employed most happily in etherizing his women patients. No, this doesn't show that the ruling passion is strong in death. But it is a real discovery since it promises to lead to a greater discovery, and this is that woman does not think with her brain, after all; that neither are her sensory nerves located in the supposed seat of intelligence, her mind. All the roads that lead to Rome in her case, touching sensation and emotion, register upon the switchboard of her heart.

COMMERCIAL

Weekly Review of Trade and Market Reports.

Dun's Review says:

"Evidences of reviving commercial and industrial activity steadily multiply and business optimism is becoming widespread. This spirit of confidence finds a reflection in the more general anticipation of future requirements, and since merchandise stocks at all leading points must be replenished, prospects are encouraging for a satisfactory fall and winter season."

Bradstreet's says:

"In some respects trade reports suggest somewhat more irregularity. Western advices indicate conservative buying, presumably a reflex of reports of reduced crop yields, but at the same time they proclaim that trade is equal to or in excess of that done at this time last year, when operations certainly were growing. On the other hand, the more important Eastern markets, particularly those having to do with textiles, display more vim, house trade has enlarged and mills instead of making concessions are insisting upon higher prices."

A thing which many voters do not appear to clearly understand is that every voter is entitled to cast two separate and distinct ballots at the primary election next Tuesday, if he chooses to do so and is enrolled by stating his party preference when he registered.

He has a right to vote for a non-partisan ballot for judge of the superior court, and another ballot containing the names of candidates for local offices—two separate tickets.

There will be no mark on the non-partisan ballot to indicate what party the candidates belong to. It is the intention of the law that the Judges shall be nominated and elected without any regard to party politics.

It is important that every voter shall clearly understand these things in order that he may exercise all his rights as a free American citizen.

Supporting a Husband In Wales.

The quaint Pembrokeshire village of Langwm and the Gower village of Penclawdd have something in common besides their Flemish connection. In both the woman takes a leading place. At Langwm when a forthcoming marriage is announced one often hears the exclamation, "Peggy, can she keep a man?" At Penclawdd when a young woman gets married the very first thing some of the sourest old maids ask is: "Dear me! Ffordd mae hona'n myn'd i gadw gwr?" ("Dear me! How is that one going to support a husband?").—Western Mail, Cardiff.

Origin of the Christmas Stocking.

From Italy comes the legend from which we are supposed to get the time honored custom of hanging up the Christmas stocking. Good old St. Nicholas of Padua used to throw long knitted purses tied at both ends into the open windows of the very poor people, and these purses were of yarn and not unlike a footless stocking. Finally it became the custom of the people to hang these empty receptacles out of their windows on the night before Christmas so that St. Nicholas would put a gift into them as he passed by. By and by, when the coin of the realm became scarce, toys were put in for the children and useful presents for grown people. In the north country, where it was rather chilly at Christmas time, the purses were hung on the mantelpiece, and it was believed that the good old saint would come down the chimney and fill them. When these purses went out of fashion stockings were substituted and have been used ever since.

DEATHS.

Word was received here on Monday evening announcing the death of Milton Snyder at his home in Greensburg, his death having occurred at a little after six o'clock on that days after an illness of about three week, with typhoid fever. The funeral services will be held at his late home this (Thursday) evening at 7:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Bromer, pastor of the Reformed church, of which the deceased was a member. The remains will be shipped to Centre Hall Friday morning, and interment will be made here from the afternoon train east. Rev. R. R Jones will be the minister in charge.

A. Jacobs, who died in Centre Hall.

Mrs. Laura Lee and Miss Rebecca Derstine will go to State College to take charge of a fraternity house. Mrs. Kate Saunders and daughter Miss Elizabeth will also locate in the same place and conduct a fraternity.

Samuel F. Hosterman, son of John Hosterman of Penn Hall, was operated on for appendicitis at an Altoona hospital, the latter part of last week. Mr. Hosterman just attained his majority, and was in Altoona on his vacation, being a telegrapher on the Pennsy at Elizabethville. His condition Wednesday was reported to be rather serious.

H. H. Bricker, the groceryman, will be at his old stand on Grange Park during the Encampment and Fair, with a full line of groceries, candies, soft drinks, and the celebrated ice cream manufactured at State College. He will have a new building in which to do business, but it will be exactly on the old site. You are invited to call to see him.

MY PLEDGE

To the Democratic Electors of Centre County.

If chosen "State Committeeman" by a majority of the Democratic electors of Centre county, at the primary election to be held next Tuesday, September 16th, 1913, in that capacity I will always support the Democratic National, STATE and COUNTY organizations.

I would regard my selection as a direct commission from a majority of my party to support and uphold what is known as the Reorganization movement in the Democratic party of Pennsylvania.

Upon this pledge I solicit the influence and support of every Democratic voter in Centre County, who is in full accord with these principles.

Spring Mills.

Mrs. Immel spent Sunday in Union county.

Quite a number of people attended the fair at Bellefonte.

Moses Stover sold the hotel to Perry Krise of Potters Mills.

Edward Decker will move to State College where he has found employment.

William Rossman of Willow Grove is paying his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Rossman, a visit.

Hon. William M. Allison went to Philadelphia on Tuesday to attend the Millers' Association which meets in that city this week.

Mrs. C. A. Krape returned from a trip to Illinois and other points of interest, and is very much benefitted and delighted with the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. John Myers spent a few days at Boalsburg and brought Master John Andrew along home with them, after having spent the summer at that place.

John Hosterman was called to Altoona on Sunday, where his son Samuel is in the hospital for a serious operation. Mrs. Hosterman also went to see her son, on Monday.

The schools at Spring Mills and all over Gregg township opened on Monday with a fair attendance. The High School here is taught by W. R. Jones of Centre Hall; Grammar, William Haney; Intermediate, A. Duck; Primary, Gertrude Musser.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Houser and Mrs. Daniel Kennely started to attend bush meeting near Tusseyville last Sunday and when near the Red Mill the back seat of the spring wagon tilted, throwing Mrs. Houser and Mrs. Kennelly out. The latter was pretty badly bruised, and it was necessary to call Dr. Braucht. Mrs. Houser was not injured at all.

Centre Mills.

The Foster farm owned by Harry Miller was sold to Adam Reish of Zion. He will occupy the farm next spring.

Mrs. John Kline spent from Saturday until Monday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Godshall, in Centre Hall.

Saturday night and Sunday heavy thunder showers passed over this section. Lightning did no other damage than strike a tree near here.

Mr. and Mrs. Elias Breon recently returned from the far west where they spent a month. They tell of wonderful sights and experiences. On their return home they past through a large area of country that was literally burned up from the excessive heat and lack of moisture. Not a green blade of grass was to be seen, and corn was thoroughly dried. Farmers in that section sold their cattle because of lack of feed.

ALFALFA FOR HOGS.

Kansas Experiment Proves the Great Value of Alfalfa and Corn as a Balanced Ration—Hog Growers Note the Result of This Interesting Feeding Experiment.

This experiment was conducted at the Kansas Agricultural college:

The pigs shown in the accompanying chart were litter mates. The larger pig was fed on a ration of corn and alfalfa hay; the smaller on corn alone.

Several litters of weanling pigs were equally divided into two lots. The pigs were carefully chosen as to weight and thriftiness, so that each lot represented a fair average of the total number of pigs used in the experiment.

The experiment was carried on for a period of eight months. At the end of this time the pigs fed on corn and alfalfa hay were in excellent condition for market and averaged 250 pounds, dressed, while the pigs fed on corn alone were thin and scrawny and averaged but 60 pounds each. In the latter case, one pig died of what the veterinarian declared to be starvation, notwithstanding the fact that this lot of pigs had all the corn they could eat.

Must Have Protein.

The 60-pound pigs lacked protein, that element required in growing animals, to develop bone and muscle, blood, nerve and tissue—that which builds the frame—the very thing that the pigs do not get when fed upon corn alone.

Corn is deficient in protein and has an abundance of starch and sugar. Neither alfalfa nor corn when fed alone will give the best results, but a combination of the two make a perfectly balanced ration.

A balanced ration is a combination of feeds containing elements necessary for the proper physical development of the animal. Protein, the most essential element in animal feed, builds the frame of the body while corn is essentially valuable for the production of fat.

The bones of the "corn-alfalfa" lot of pigs were double the size of the lot fed on corn alone and stood a breaking strain of 1,370 pounds as against 520 pounds for the lot fed on a single ration of corn.

HAY CAPS FOR ALFALFA.

Alfalfa should be raked and either put in the barn or if it is not sufficiently dry, put into hay cocks. It is a matter of economy to have two or three hundred hay caps (made of six-cent cloth one yard square) to use in case of bad weather. You may think this is considerable bother, but poor alfalfa is poor stuff, and when we remember that good alfalfa brings us in actual results nearly as great returns as wheat bran, we can better realize the importance of taking care of it. If any of us had 500 "hay cocks of bran" in the field, we would take care of them, but with alfalfa we think of it as "just hay."

These cloths may have wooden pegs or some sort of weights attached to each corner to hold them in place; the pegs can be pushed into the hay to hold the corners fast. Hay caps will soon pay for themselves in finer quality of hay guaranteed by their use.

LOCALS.

Miss Kathryn Keller of Ingram is visiting at the home of her friend, Miss Cora Brungart, in Centre Hall.

William Myers of Spring Mills is running the water wagon and Ray Stover of Aaronsburg the steam roller on the street in Centre Hall.

If you want a first class dish of ice cream, call on H. H. Bricker, the groceryman, on Grange Park during the Encampment and Fair.

George L. Horner will make sale of his personal property some time this fall and will move from his Nittany Mountain farm. Dates, etc, will appear later.

The street talk is that John D Moore purchased one of the Gregg farms, but his son, T. L. Moore, says the rumor is untrue, or at least ahead of action. It was also reported that D. L. Bartges had purchased the town property of James S. Reish, but this Mr Bartges also denies.

On his way from Centre Hall to his home at Jarrettsville, Maryland, William W. Reitz took seriously ill while in a restaurant in Baltimore. He became so reduced from a hemorrhage of the nose that it became necessary to take him to a sanitarium in an ambulance, and for several days he was unable to sit up in bed.

Gasoline Evaporates Rapidly.

One pint of gasoline left in an uncovered basin in a room at a normal or average temperature will entirely evaporate within twenty-four hours. As gasoline vapor is denser than the surrounding air, unless disturbed by active air currents, its presence in the room may be detected for many hours. One pint of gasoline will make 200 cubic feet of explosive mixture, and this mixture is seven times more powerful than gunpowder.—Popular Mechanics.

TIME TO CUT ALFALFA

One of Controlling Factors in Taking Care of Hay.

Start Mower in Morning as Soon as Dew Is Off and Prospects Seem Good for Three Days of Good Weather.

The best time to cut alfalfa is when about one-tenth of the blooms are out, or if an examination is made at the base of the stalk new shoots are seen making their appearance. Many times it is even practical to cut the first crop a few days earlier, especially if a large acreage is to be harvested. Time is one of the controlling factors in taking care of the hay, so it is necessary for the grower to exercise judicious planning to utilize his time to the best advantage.

It is a good plan to start the mower as soon as the dew is off in the morning and the prospects seem good for two or three days of continued good weather. This hay should be tedded in the swath in the afternoon, so that it will dry out underneath. The side delivery rake is good, in fact, the ideal machine to turn the hay. Beginning on the outside of the field, the hay is carried further out, leaving an open space which will be heated by the sun before the next round is made. On turning the next swath the dry, hot stubble and soil will quickly draw the moisture from it, therefore the hay is curing from below as well as from above. The following morning the same rake is used as soon as the hay is sufficiently dry, and two swaths put in one, and in the afternoon it is ready to be stacked or hauled into the mow.

The following method is practiced, and lends itself admirably to taking care of a hay crop if it is not too heavy: The mower would be run late in the afternoon, when not much wilting will take place and when the undergrowth is perfectly dry. The advantage of this over the early morning is that the soil is warm and dry, and that less surface is exposed to become wet by dew than when alfalfa is standing. The hay is turned in the following morning just before noon, and will be ready to rake and stack in the middle of the afternoon. Another plan is to rake in the afternoon and put it up in small cocks, turning these over the following day, replacing these two into one, and letting them cure for a few days before stacking. It is of the greatest importance that the hay be absolutely dry from dew before putting it into the barn or stack. Alfalfa is more difficult to cure properly than the grasses, because the leaves fall off so readily, and when we consider that these make up 48 per cent of the crop by weight, their true value is very significant.

FARMING IN HAPHAZARD WAY

Course at State Agricultural College Will Imbed Desire to Work in More Modern Methods.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

There is no need for any farmer to keep on farming in the same old haphazard way. A course at his state agricultural college will fill him with a strong desire to farm in the more modern way—the way which brings success. Plan to spend a few weeks or months, if possible, at the college this winter.

All of these schools have short courses for those farmers, young and old, who cannot be away from home for any length of time, but in these courses, the time is so fully taken up—morning, afternoon and evening, that the wide-awake farmer can accomplish a great amount in a very short time.

A course in general agriculture is given for farmers, who do not care to specialize in any particular branch of farming, but wish to secure a better knowledge of all phases of agriculture. It includes work in soil fertility, farm management, farm crops, poultry raising, dairying in all of its branches, animal husbandry, horticulture, insect study, and plant diseases.

A study of these subjects will increase the earning capacity of every farmer.

Salt for Horses.

Horses at hard work and on full grain feed should have salt often. A good way is to keep a lump of rock salt in the corner of each feed box—they are the best judges of the amount of salt they require, and if afforded a constant supply will not eat much.

German Foresters.

There are nearly six thousand professional foresters in Germany, who are associated with various technical societies.

Importance of Cleanliness.

Cleanliness is always important but it never goes further toward making good butter than during dog days.

BENEFIT BY USING CONCRETE

Farmer Adds Both Comfort and Safety, Besides Saving Money—Cement Is Not Large Item.

(By WALTER B. LEUTZ.)

Safety, economy and utility are the prime considerations in silo building and on all of these points farmers are finding themselves gainers from the use of concrete. Concrete structures are much safer and in the long run are more economical. The original cost is about the same as for silos of other materials if the farmer is able to do the work with his regular force. When the durability and lessened risk are considered it is seen that the concrete construction is economical in almost all circumstances. The concrete silo is sanitary and preserves the fodder in a satisfactory way. This fact has been demonstrated by government tests.

Farmers who have not studied the subject of concrete construction will do well to take it up. In most cases the material will be cheaper and handier than lumber. It is of high value for walks, dairy floors, milk houses, watering troughs and steps, as well as for general architectural work.

Where the farmer is able to supply the sand and gravel without much expense and has time to perform the labor of construction, or at least to supervise it, the outlay for any given piece of work will probably be less than it would be if lumber were used. The proportion of cement required is not a large item of expense.

The farmer also gains in the matter of insurance as he goes forward with his experiments in concrete construction. This is an important consideration, and he adds both comfort and safety, besides saving money.

HOW MUCH WILL SILO HOLD?

Amount Can Be Closely Calculated Provided Number and Kind of Animals Are Known.

(By A. D. WILSON.)

The amount of silage required and the size of silo needed to hold it can be quite closely calculated provided the number and kind of animals to be fed from it are known before building.

An average cow or beef animal may be fed about thirty-five pounds of silage per day and the usual period during which silage is used in this latitude will be about 210 days. Large animals or those that are being fattened may consume considerably more than thirty-five pounds per day, but this has been found a fair average.

In a silo of ordinary depth, the average weight of the silage is about forty pounds per cubic foot. Near the top of the silo, however, where the presure is not great, it will weigh only twenty-five pounds per cubic foot while at the bottom of a thirty-five foot silo it may weigh sixty pounds. Taking these averages, if a cow eats thirty-five pounds of ensilage in a day, she will eat thirty-five fortieths, or seven-eighths, of a cubic foot per day, and with this as a basis it is easy to determine the number of cubic feet of ensilage required to feed a cow or any number of cows throughout the season. The diameter of the silo must be such that the stock on hand can use one or two inches of silage off the top each day during the winter and at least three inches per day when summer feeding of silage is to be practiced. This is necessary to keep the silage from spoiling.

A silo ten feet in diameter is adapted to feeding ten mature cattle. One twelve feet in diameter will feed fifteen head, and one fourteen feet in diameter will meet the needs of twenty head; but if there are thirty or more cows to feed, a sixteen-foot silo should be erected. These silos should be thirty or forty feet, or even more in height.

SOME GOOD POULTRY DON'TS

Particular Attention Should Be Paid to Drinking Fountains and Character of Feed.

Don't let the drinking fountain sit in the sun, for if you do your poultry will surely get diseased.

Don't feed sour and unwholesome food, because if you do the fowls will have indigestion and liver trouble.

Don't forget to provide shade for the poultry, the scorching hot sun will be sure to make the hens sick.

Don't keep the males in the same yards with the females. If you have no separate pen, sell them to the butcher.

Don't forget to supply grit and oyster shells. The hens need them as badly during summer as they do in the winter.

Don't forget to bury any fowl that chances to die. Disease is spread through a whole flock by allowing a decaying carcass to lie around.

Don't wait till fall to sell all surplus stock. Now is the best and most profitable time.

Useful Tool.

A tool used to fight fires on the California forests combines a rake, spade and hoe. It is compact, so that it can be carried on horseback, and weighs less than 5½ pounds.

EX-REGULARS FOR STATE POLICE

Nine Men With Army Records Join Troops

$154,274.55 INHERITANCE TAX

Several Applications for Pardon Filed with State Board—Department of Labor Extends Supervision to Doctor's Office Buildings.

(Special Harrisburg Correspondence.)

Harrisburg.—Everyone of the nine men enlisted for service in the State police was able to show a record in the regular army and several of them came out of the federal service with commendatory remarks upon their discharge papers. The enlistments were to fill vacancies caused by expiration of terms, the discipline and training secured by the men while in state service being of such a grade that they are in demand for better places with railroads or manufacturing companies as soon as their terms are ended.

The men enlisted and the organizations in which they served were: Benjamin Grant, corporal, field artillery; B. C. Snyder, sergeant, Seventh Cavalry; Peter Murphy, signal corps; W. E. Brown, sergeant, field artillery; G. H. Gardner, Sixth Cavalry; Louis Melvin, field artillery; F. A. Wightwick, Fifteenth Cavalry and Twenty-ninth Infantry; J. E. Downes, Eleventh Cavalry, and Percy Wilson, Fifteenth Cavalry.

The men of the State police have been in great demand for service at fairs and old home week celebrations this fall. No less than sixty-nine requests for their presence at fairs are on file at the department.

The State Police Service Commission will take up the complaints which have been filed in the last few weeks when it meets here and may also decide upon a date for a further hearing on the telephone schedule. Several companies have asked to be heard. A number of the recent complaints have dealt with inadequate water service, a proposition which the old State Railroad Commission could not deal.

Dr. C. J. Hunt, associate chief medical inspector of the Department of Health, is making an investigation into the causes of the typhoid cases recently reported from Altoona.

Inspections of buildings in Harrisburg by the Department of Labor and Industry to make sure of safety appliances have been extended to doctor's office buildings where there are any tenants. The inspection thus far has covered only a small part of the city, but has included hotels, apartments, lodging houses, moving picture theatres, stores, warehouses and offices, being the most thorough of the kind ever made. In many instances it has been found that fire precautions were needed.

Backache Warns You

Backache is one of Nature's warnings of kidney weakness. Kidney disease kills thousands every year.

Don't neglect a bad back. If your back is lame—if it hurts to stoop or lift—if there is irregularity of the secretions—suspect your kidneys. If you suffer headaches, dizziness and are tired, nervous and worn-out, you have further proof.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills, a fine remedy for bad backs and weak kidneys.

A Maine Case

Mrs. J. H. Bennett, 59 Fountain St., Gardiner, Me., says: "I was in bed four months with kidney trouble. My back felt as though it was broken. My body bloated and I could hardly see. Five doctors failed to help me. When I had given up hope, I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I was cured and now I weigh much more and am strong and healthy."

Had No Use for It.

A little girl came down to dessert at a dinner party, and sat next to her mother. This lady was much occupied in talking to her neighbors and omitted to give the child anything to eat. After some time the little girl, unable to bear it any longer, with sobs rising in her throat, held up her plate and said: "Does anybody want a clean plate?"

Wail From French Jurymen.

In France, as well as in England, jurymen have their grievances. The latest can easily be remedied. The French minister of justice has received an address signed by citizens figuring on the Paris jury lists, protesting against the bare appearance of the courts where they have to sit. They point out that if—tired of looking at the judges, counsel, witnesses and other parties to a suit—they turn their eyes upon the walls, nothing but an inartistic paper meets their gaze. In order to relieve this deadly monotony they beg that a print of Prudhon's famous picture, "Justice in Pursuit of Crime," may be hung in each court.

Banana Eaters.

Americans used to be called a nation of pie eaters. Today a more appropriate term would be a nation of banana eaters. The United States takes more than two-thirds of the bananas shipped to the handlers in the world.

Part of this preeminence in banana consumption is due to geography; the source of supply on the Caribbean is almost at our doors. Part is due to accident; a Boston skipper introduced the American public to this tropical fruit while it was still unknown in Europe. Whatever reason one may choose to give, the United States is the world's chief banana market, and though the use of this fruit is increasing abroad, the American boy remains the Jamaica grower's best friend.

Interesting Beginning.

A fair graduate was conversing with a young gentleman who had been presented to her after the commencement exercises.

"Well," she sighed happily, "I am an A B now. Of course you have a degree?"

"Yes," he replied, "but I am only a B."

The fair grad pondered. The degree was puzzling.

"Bachelor," he said.—New York Times.

"Fish? The last fish was caught out of that lake three years ago."

"Well, I know that. Suppose I don't get any fish, I've had a tiptop boat ride, haven't I?"

Haste Unnecessary.

"Hurry up that order!" said a traveler in a railroad eating house down south. "I'm afraid I'll miss my train!"

"Yas, sah, boss!" the waiter answered as he hurried off.

After what seemed an almost interminable wait to the traveler, he returned with the food. As he set it down he asked:

"Is you de gentlemans what feared he'd miss de train?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, you needn't be feared ob dat, sah, no mo'."

"Good! Is it late?" the traveler inquired.

"No, sah, it's done gone!" was the waiter's affable and reassuring response.

Personal appeals will be made to clergymen, school principals and leaders of various organizations urging them to set aside a definite time during the week preceding or the week following December 7, for a lecture on tuberculosis.

ECZEMA ON HEAD AND FACE

Reedy, W. Va.—"My baby boy when three weeks old took the eczema on the head and face. It broke out in pimples and first they looked like blisters and a yellow water would run from them. His head was perfectly raw and his hair was all gone. Everybody said he would never have any more hair. As the sores spread his hair came out. The breaking out itched so badly that we had to keep gloves on his hands to keep him from scratching his head and face. It caused disfigurement. He couldn't rest at night it burned and itched so badly.

"He was treated for eight months and he got worse all the time. So I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In two months he was completely cured after using the Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) G. A. Dye, Jan. 7, 1912.

KEY WAS UNDER DOOR MAT

Important Information for Which Conductor of Indianapolis Car Held the Passengers.

The South East street car was hurrying on its way toward the end of the line. Near the ten hundred block the single line branches out into a switch. The cars slow up and the passengers, generally known personally by the conductor, often have time to exchange pleasantries as the cars pass. A German woman was on the car coming downtown the other day. As the car slid on the switch and started to pass the other she got up excitedly and waved toward the car headed for the end of the line.

"Oh, Charlie! Oh, Charlie!" she shouted at a youth on the other car, evidently her son, on his way home. Charlie did not catch the signal at first, and the cars gathered speed.

"Charlie! Charlie!" came the voice, this time more insistent. Then Charlie looked around and saw the other car going off the switch, with the woman still waving excitedly.

The motorman was aroused by this time and, thinking that the summons was urgent, stopped the car and Charlie jumped off and made a beeline for mother.

She met him at the door. "I just wanted to say that the key is under the mat at the back door!" she yelled. And Charlie jumped off, waved at his conductor and caught his car amid the cheers of the other passengers.—Indianapolis News.

ALL WANT TO NAME THE BABY

Advice Heaped in Profusion on Keepers of Big City's Zoological Gardens.

"The arrival of a baby animal or bird of any kind from a hippopotamus to a canary at either of the city zoos gives people all over town a chance to spread themselves in the matter of names," said a New York park keeper.

"Everybody wants the honor of naming the baby. Letters come from all parts of the city, and from the surrounding country suggesting names that the writers think appropriate. Patriotism runs high among our correspondents. If they had their way half the animals in the park would be called 'Abe' Lincoln, and a large part of the other half 'Teddy' Roosevelt. Regardless of the sex of the youngster, these two presidential appellations are urged upon us.

"Classical and Scriptural names also have their advocates. Hercules and Plato in particular are proposed.

"Of all the ladies of antiquity Niobe seems to have first call. Once in a while a writer of a sentimental turn of mind suggests a more modern romantic name. Out of consideration for the animal fancy names are taboo to start with. To call a beast of the jungle Violet or Queenie is enough to shame the most docile of infants into a reversion to type."

Proving It.

"Men are worth much more than women."

"No such thing!"

"Yes, they are. Husbands are not easy to get always, but brides are just given away."—Baltimore American.

Bought Second Farm.

Adam F. Heckman of Tusseyville purchased the Henry Royer farm, along Sinking Creek below Centre Hill, owned by J. F. Weaver, paying $4200 for it. The farm contains one hundred and six acres, and was purchased by Mr. Weaver about two years ago.

Mr. Heckman, a few years ago, purchased the Gilliland farm from Perry W. Breon. If he can secure a property in Centre Hall he will move to this place.

Harvest Home.

Sunday morning the Reformed church held their annual Harvest Home service. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, fruit, vegetables and grains.

The service was opened with an appropriate anthem by the choir. The audience, which filled the church, entered heartily into the spirit of the service, joining in the singing, listening attentatively to the sermon, and giving a liberal offering to the support of the Gospel. From the beginning to the end the service was worshipful and inspiring.

Deaths of Centre Countians.

Mrs. Jane Lewis, wife of James Lewis, at her home at Dick Run, aged sixty years.

David Schenck, a Howard township farmer, aged seventy-three years.

Mrs. Rachel Warner, wife of Samuel Warner, of Snow Shoe Intersection, aged almost seventy-six years.

Miss Ruth Crouse is paying her friend, Miss Emma Bachman, in Osceola a visit.

Mrs. J. P. Coburn is spending a few weeks in Bellefonte with her sister, Mrs. Eveline Rogers.

Mrs. John Coldron of Centre Hall was in town last week to attend the funeral of her niece, on Saturday.

Mrs. C. W. Mingle of Akron, Ohio, came here last week to visit her aged mother, Mrs. Sarah Sureffler.

Marion Stover spent Sunday at State College the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Herman.

Zwingli Haffley was called home from Altoona on account of the illness of Mrs. Haffley, who is now improving.

W. C. Mingle and Henry Mingle of Akron, Ohio, were kindly received by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Mingle, and other friends.

Mrs. George McKay and daughter Florence of Philadelphia are enjoying their summer vacation with Mrs. McKay's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Philips.

Mrs. Herbert Hosterman and two children Isabell and Herbert of Buffalo, N. Y., are the guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Mingle.

Ruth and Pauline Musser, daughters of the up-to-date painter C. S. Musser, are spending a few weeks in Bellefonte with their sister, Mrs. John Tressler, and will also be in Centre Hall for a few days.

Miss Mildred Acker, who for three years was with her sister, Mrs. Cordelia Flickinger, in Chicago, Illinois, for several months was at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Acker, in Aaronsburg, but is now in Akron, Ohio, and is stenographer in the office of the Gordyan rubber works.

The streets in Centre Hall are in better shape today than for many years just prior to the Encampment. The council got the habit of doing rough repair work just a week or two prior to the Grange Fair, leaving the road in bad condition for driving all kinds of vehicles and auto cars. This year conditions were changed, good roads came just when they were most needed, but not too soon.

Really, the Reporter can't believe that the South Side Democrats are willing to permit Col. Taylor to set their pace. Their very intimate acquaintance with the Colonel's political career will require more than a signed newspaper article to counter act.

MEDICAL INSPECTION IN SCHOOLS.

Is Regarded by Authorities as a Valuable Community Investment.

"Medical Inspection in the School a Community Investment," was the subject of Dr. Ira S. Wile, of the New York City board of education, before the fourth International Congress on School Hygiene held at Buffalo.

"If 40,000 children suffer retardation in school for one year," said Dr. Wile, "because the decrease in vitality due to adenoids and enlarged tonsils, as was reported in the state of Minnesota, the educational waste is evident. If the cost of instruction of each child is $25 per annum, the economic loss would represent $1,000,000. Possibly this economic decrement is somewhat theoretical because the children would be receiving instruction anyway. The true deficit would be the decrease in education as a result of leaving school one or two grades below that reached by normal children

"The correction of defects increases the industrial efficiency of future citizens and thus tends to make them more valuable to the community. By increasing industrial efficiency the future will profit from a decrease in dependency and pauperism and a diminution in civic loss by death, sickness and incapacity. In the words of Sir Lauder Brumton, it is cheaper to spend pence on children than pounds on paupers. By decreasing blindness, insanity and criminality and similar social burdens medical inspection tends to lighten future municipal expenditures for the relief of such condition. Such are some of the positive benefits of medical inspection regarded as a communal investment."

"Molly" and "Dick."

The Millheim Journal tells of "Molly" a faithful old mare, left by the sons of the late J. C. Motz to friends to care for as long as she was useful. At the age of thirty years, "Molly" was declared useless, and was humanely killed. The account of "Molly's" passing away was read to "Dick," the faithful black horse owned by the writer for twenty-four and one-half years, and it caused him to think of his own age—over thirty years—and then to say that he was too busy just now to pass in his checks. "Dick" has been a good horse, and since he has a wide acquaintance throughout Centre county, the Reporter takes this occasion to tell a few of his good qualities. Although thirty and one-half years old, he never had his name in the news columns in connection with a run-off but he did figure in one or two big pulls that put him into the personal column. During the past season "Dick" was busy every day, his chief occupation having been to help make hay, not as an assistant, but as a standby in the mower, at the wagon tongue, and at the end of the hay rope to hoist a hundred tons of cured hay, and his task will not be completed in this line for the season until October. He was born in Ohio, sold at a sale in Centre Hall when three years old. He has always been in good flesh and good spirits; always shells his own corn, and knows how much grain to eat, and how to take care of number one.

REBERSBURG

Miss Emma Moyer left on Monday for Selins Grove where she will attend school.

Mrs. Wm. Minnich and daughter Mary of State College were visitors in our town over Sunday.

Some of our potato growers say that the potatoes are rotting to an alarming extent

Miss Flossie Luse left on Saturday for Centre Hall where she will be employed in the family of Jacob Sprow.

Wesley Hackenburg is now the owner of an auto which he quite recently bought of Mr. Hazel of Madisonburg.

Wm. Shull, who is employed at Pittsburg, is at present at this place visiting his mother and other relatives.

Our farmers are busy cutting the corn crop which is fast dying off on account of the severe drought which prevails in this vicinity at present.

Rev. Hassinger, the Lutheran minister at this place, has accepted a call as pastor at Jeannette, and will leave with his family for that place some time in October.

Misses Beatrice Krider and Florence Hazel, students at the Central State Normal School at Lock Haven, after spending their vacation with their parents at this place, returned to the Normal on Monday to resume their studies.

Wm Zeigler, who is tenant on the Celia Brungart farm two miles east of Wolfs Store, has rented the D. D Royer farm near this place and will move onto it this coming spring. Clayton Auman has rented the Brungart farm and will move there as soon as Zeigler vacates it

At a town meeting of Mifflinburg citizens, the movement was backed to spend $8000 in the construction of two reservoirs, which are to be built large enough to hold sufficient water to tide over severe droughts. Some time ago Mifflinburg had a fire, and it happened at a time when there was a shortage of water. It was this that led the citizens to sanction the movement to build reservoirs.

The Sack Suit.

It is hard for a today's man, as he leans back in his sack suit and tries to think, to imagine a time when the easy and comfortable bobtail coat was yet unknown and all coats sported tails.

The sack suit originated in France in the thirties, about the same time that our trousers took their present shape. It is possible that the two innovations were corelated, as the changes in coat and trousers have always gone hand in hand. France was the mother of the sack when it was developed from the French blouse, a garment of coarse linen worn by laborers and peasants. The new coat was at first worn only by laborers, but before long it became very fashionable in France. It did not cross the English channel until 1846 and was not worn in this country much until after the civil war. In fact, it was the war uniform of the soldiers that gave its introduction to the American public. The soldiers found out the merits of the short coats, so civilian short coats became popular. They were soon adopted by all classes in the United States.—New York Sun.

Dryden's Ruse.

The story is told that Dryden, finishing his translation of "Virgil," sent it to Jacob Tonson for publication for a sum specified upon the manuscript. Tonson was desirous of obtaining the book, but determined to take advantage of Dryden's need of money. He therefore informed the poet that he could not pay the sum Dryden asked. In reply Dryden sent the following lines in description of the publisher:

With leering look, bull faced and freckled fair,
With two left legs, with Judas colored hair
And frowzy pores that taint the ambient air.

When this was delivered to Tonson he asked if Dryden had said anything more. "Yes," replied the bearer; "he said to tell the dog that he who wrote these lines could write more like them." Tonson sent the money at once.

Love's Young Dream.

The newly married young woman rushed into her father's presence and threw herself on her knees before him.

"Oh, papa!" she sobbed. "I have come for your forgiveness and blessing! It was wrong and undutiful of me, but I loved Richard so that I just had to elope with him. But I couldn't be happy till I had been reconciled with you, so here I am at your feet."

"Well, well," growled the old man, much affected in spite of himself. "I suppose I'll have to. But you are alone—where is—er—Richard?"

"He's just outside, papa, dear, with the cabman. And, now that you have forgiven us, please lend us enough to pay the horrid brute so that he'll go away. You see, we had only enough money for the license and the minister."—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

Dog Laws of Richard II.

When Richard II. was king of England the keeping of greyhounds by servants, grooms and artificers led to trouble, for these sportsmen would go a-hunting in parks and warrens the while "Christian people be at church hearing divine service." This, it was thought, was not good for park, warren or the soul of the servant. Reforms were arranged. The law was laid down that neither layman with less than 40 shillings nor clerk with less than £10 should keep sporting dogs or engines of game destruction. And further, the servant and laborer were ordered to have bows and arrows and to keep Sunday and holiday in using them and to "leave all playing at tennis and football and other importunate games."

A Spool of Cotton.

"But for Napoleon," said the spool, "I, like the Arc de Triomphe, would never have existed." In Napoleon's time thread was only made of silk and of wool. Napoleon to ruin the English silk thread trade destroyed the world's silk stock, which lay in Hamburg. In this crisis the Paisley spinners turned to cotton. After tremendous labor they at last made cotton thread. Cotton thread is the world's chief thread today.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

It Made a Difference.

"I done told dem s'picious neighbors o' mine dat I been losin' too many chickens an' I'd have to get a shotgun."

"Did that make any difference?"

"Yes, suh. Dey lef' de chickens alone, but dey come aroun' an' stole de shotgun."—Washington Star.

How He Spoke.

"So your husband made a speech at the banquet last night? And how did he get along?"

"Well, he couldn't have stammered more if it had been 2 o'clock in the morning and I was insisting on knowing where he had been."—Detroit Free Press.

The Geologists' Clock.

Each fossiliferous rock bed contains characteristic forms or groups of forms that determine the period in which it was mud or sand. Former Director Powell of the United States geological survey once tersely explained to a congressional committee the value of paleontology by saying that it is "the geologist's clock," by which he tells the time when rock beds were formed. The economic importance of paleontology has been repeatedly shown in this country. In the earliest exploitation of anthracite coal thousands of dollars were fruitlessly expended in New York in search of coal beds until the New York geologists showed that the beds in that state could contain no coal. The fossils in the rocks exploited are devonian, whereas the fossils of the Pennsylvania anthracite coal beds belong to the carboniferous, a much later period. This discovery at once stopped a useless expenditure of money.—Argonaut.

A Fatal Sleep.

Hugh Miller, the Scottish geologist and writer, was one of the most illustrious of sleepwalkers. Miller, who had been addicted to somnambulism in his youth, found his restlessness return while he was engaged upon his "Testimony of the Rocks." He used to wake in the morning feeling, as he said, as if he had been abroad in the night wind, dragged by some invisible power and ridden by witches. On the night of his death he slept alone. In the morning they found him stretched dead on the floor with a bullet through his breast. He had written a note to his wife: "My brain burns. I must have walked, and a fearful dream rises upon me. I cannot bear the horrible thought. My brain burns as the recollection grows." So intense had been the poor fellow's anguish that to make certain his end he had torn back shirt and vest and placed the muzzle of the pistol to his naked flesh.—St. James' Gazette.

Turks Picnic at Home.

"Simple life" picnicking in the house is thoroughly understood by the Turk. The real old fashioned Turk indeed, as Sir Charles Eliot shows, reveals his inherited nomadic instincts by treating a house merely as a place to camp in. Rooms are not assigned to special purposes. "You sit in a room and write on your hand. When you are hungry you call. A little table is brought in, and you eat. When you want to go to bed a pile of rugs is laid in a corner, and you go to sleep on it." Then a scene at Yildiz—secretaries working in a red plush room furnished in European style. "Some were sitting curled up in armchairs, with their inkpots poised perilously on the arms, the idea of having a writing table never having come into their heads. Some were squatting on the floor, eating with their fingers off broad dishes placed on a low table. One was taking a siesta in the corner."—St. James' Gazette.

Disabused His Mind.

At a London theater the other night, when a well known actress was weeping bitterly on the stage, a sensitive countryman burst into tears and wept audibly.

"What are you making that row for?" asked a neighbor.

"I'm thinking o' that poor creature's distress," was the reply.

"What? Don't you know she's paid £20 a week to do that?"

"Eh? Twenty pounds a week! Do you mean to say her crying's not real?"

"Of course not."

"Then all I've got to say is she's a deceitful hussy." And up he got and went out. "Twenty pounds a week," he was muttering as he moved into the street, "and to kick up all that row too."—London Globe.

Diseases They Have In Scotland.

Has Scotland still its own word for measles? Dean Ramsay relates that in 1775 Mrs. Betty Muirhead, who kept a boarding school for young ladies in the Trongate of Glasgow, asked a new pupil whether she had had smallpox. "Yes, mem," replied the girl, "I've had the sma'pox, the niris, the blabs, the scay, the kinkhost and the fever, the branks and the worm." "Sma'pox" and even the vague "fever" might not worry an English reader, but it needs a glossary to interpret the others in order as measles, nettlerash, itch, whooping cough, mumps and toothache.—London Tatler.

Counterthrust.

"A very good retort!" said a senator in an argument. "A very good retort indeed! It reminds me of Weeks.

"Weeks and his wife were quarreling.

"'The night you proposed,' said Mrs. Weeks, with a hard, scornful laugh, 'you acted like a fish out of water.'

"Weeks sighed.

"'But a very cleverly landed fish,' he said, in a musing voice."—Washington Star.

The Explanation.

"Why is it that some young men get on so much faster in the world than others? It must be pure luck."

"No. I rather think it is because while some are always ready to accept positions, others go out and look up jobs."—Exchange.

Homer Indeed.

"You talk as if your friend was a greater poet than Homer."

"Homer! Well, say, if Percy had tackled that Homer stuff he'd have made it rime!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
